

Differing voices is a key feature of American society. People who do not seek out alternative media (a large number of MAmerican citizens) need to at least have the mass media providing some sort of differing viewpoints.